

Whig and Courier

North, W. Va., and all north West, the ship and all port, Let the chains be Flies to a corner of the house
 Ties to the corner of the house
 And I'll see the all was
 And I'll see the all was T to the blower of the fur Which has never done it at Or been upon the
 But the culture's Tack a flag of the Beating on the
 Was in fact all But a sign that the Let the men go with Value of the life

[illegible]

was a little off, but his ears were dead, fore and aft, and he immediately began to work at the engine, but he was so busy that he did not have time to get the engine started. He was so busy that he did not have time to get the engine started. He was so busy that he did not have time to get the engine started.

[illegible][illegible]

A good thing from Amos Kendall
It is difficult to imagine any thing less from the sober, steady, master of facts Kendall, but the North Carolina paper records an anecdote of him that we think will While he was Postmaster General, he was in the habit of visiting the various States and Territories, and on one of his visits he was petitioned for the establishment of a post office to be located between two localities the rather odious names of Pollock and Hogwarts. The applicants before him agreed among themselves as to the name of the place, and he was asked to sign the order. He promptly established the office, and it has thriven since.

